FDA 510(K) INDICATIONS FOR USE

The ThermPix™ Thermovision Camera is intended to view, measure, and record heat patterns and variations. It is intended for use as adjunctive diagnostic imaging for thermally significant indications stemming from heat emitted from the human body. The significance of these thermal patterns and variations is determined by professional investigation. This device is intended for use by qualified technical personnel. Clinical judgement and experience are required to review and interpret the information transmitted.

The ThermPix™ Thermovision Camera is only for use in addition to other diagnostic medical devices. It does not provide any absolute measurement of temperature and should not be used for sole screening or diagnosis for any disease or condition. The system is not intended to be used as a thermometry device.

CAUTION: Federal (USA) law restricts this device to sale by or on the order of a physician.
